AAA24 is a con.

I've been paying since July - I'm from the uk so I pay a bit more for the membership. So far I've had one zine. I've paid £11 a month for 4 months and received very little in the way of comms, offers, I've never been invited to an online screening, it was my birthday just gone last week and didn't receive any email or offer of birthday gift. I sent them an email about this telling them that I would be cancelling but also addressing my disappointment in not receiving anything for the money I'd been paying out the past few months, I received a reply that just said, sorry you're leaving, we've cancelled your membership for you. No addressing of the issues or lack of content offered as part of their membership. What an absolute con in my mind. I've literally been paying them for nothing and then they took the money and waved. WTF?

I was hoping they would be bringing back sold out Merch in a restock for AAA24 members, they did a poll on IG to see what we would like to see come back and nothing came from it. Would have loved to get a restock on the Uncut Gems Howie Poster shirt rather than pay $200+ in resell lol.

They did that with the First Reformed hat and a few other things but I don't know if they'd done something past that?

Yeah, I've been keeping an eye on members only products and so far, it's been lackluster. Seems like it was an idea that was launched without much of a roadmap in mind. I haven't been a member for a long time but there isn't much to motivate a recurring subscription at the moment.

Yeah I live in Australia and it's the same issue for me, they do surprise drops for aaa24 members but it's 2am here when they do so I wake up and it's sold out

I even emailed them before the Marcel figurine release asking if it's limited and if they will be available when I wake up the next day and they said yes, I woke up and they were sold out

They really shouldn't offer an international plan when it's useless for international customers
